

River Circles Fiber Art

Original Photo by David Lorenz Winston

River Circles were created from recycled fabric, yarn, and objects. This on-going community project aims to create one River Circle for each five miles of the Klamath River. Some of the last remaining wild Pacific salmon spawn in this river. We intend to bring attention to their plight and to the tribes who have lived on the Klamath and its tributaries for over 7000 years and who depend on the salmon for their culture and livelihood.

One-third of sales of River Circles are donations to the Tribal Environmental and Fisheries Programs through Madrona Arts. Specific information is available on the Madrona Arts website.
